Philip Woodworth Ogilvie was born December 1, 1941, in Los Angeles, CA. He graduated from Excelsior Union High School, Norwalk, CA (1949), received an AA degree from Long Beach (CA) City College (1952), a BA in Life Science from California State University, Long Beach (1954), an MA in Zoology from the University of Kansas (1959) and a Ph. D. from the University of Oklahoma (1966).

After receiving his BA, Phil Ogilvie spent 1954-1956 at Ft Sam Houston Army Base teaching surgical techniques. From 1956-1959, he was a teaching assistant at the University of Kansas and also an assistant curator of ornithology (1958-1959). After earning his MA, he taught high school biology at two different high schools in Glendale, AZ, for two years. From there he went to Africa and was senior biology master at a school in Tanganyika (1961-1962) and then a “senior lecturer” in biology at a school in Uganda (1962-1963). On returning to the U. S., he was an instructor at Teachers College, Columbia University, for a year. He then went to the University of Oklahoma where he received his Ph. D. in Animal Behavior (1966), taught there and was director of the Oklahoma City Zoo (1966-1969). Dr. Ogilvie was director of the Minnesota Zoo in St. Paul (1969-1971), the Portland Zoo in Oregon (1971-1975) and the Toronto Zoo in Canada (1975-1976). He was a member of Phi Sigma and Sigma Xi, both professional fraternities.

In 1977, Philip Ogilvie moved to Washington, D. C., for a job in the Office of Endangered Species, U. S. Department of Interior. He became involved in the campaign of Marion Barry for mayor of Washington in 1978. Barry’s election changed Phil Ogilvie’s life completely when he went to work as a consultant in the mayor’s office. He was appointed executive director of the D. C. Foundation for Creative Space (1979-1982). In 1982, Phil Ogilvie campaigned for Mayor Barry's re-election. After that he became expert and program analyst in the Office of the Secretary of D. C. Government (1983-1984) and continued as supervisory special assistant (1984-1987). In 1988, Mayor Barry appointed him head of the new public records office, known as D. C. Archives. As D. C. Archivist, Dr. Ogilvie organized and consolidated all of the official papers of the city government in a central facility (1986-1997). He also lectured at George Mason University and Georgetown University on political history, zoo philosophy and ecology (1990-2002).

After he retired from D. C. Archives in 1997, Dr. Philip W. Ogilvie became a Senior Associate in the International Institute of Tourism, George Washington University (1998-2002).
